

Supersize Crocs
Are They Gone for Good?

"Crocodile News Report" organizer

You will be responsible for writing six news reports based on the incidents mentioned in the "Crocodiles Eat Dozen People in Lake Victoria in Uganda" article from the Xinhua News Agency. The reports are going to be written from six varying perspectives.

Report One

This will be written from the perspective of a person who has recently lost a family member to a crocodile attack and will include statistics regarding the number and frequency of crocodile attacks.

Report Two

This report will be written from the perspective of a naturalist and will include information on the physical features that allow a crocodile to catch its prey.

Report Three

This report will be written by a conservationist and will include tips on how to avoid a crocodile attack.

Report Four

This report will be written from the perspective of a Toraja. The following information may be useful in writing the report:

"The Toraja of central Sulawesi believe that the crocodile may be an ancestor and address him as "grandfather." They say that crocodiles do no harm to anyone, except when Poe Mpalaburu (Vishnu, the Maintainer of Creation) commands a crocodile to kill a certain person. Certain wicked men, they relate, can reincarnate into crocodiles in order to settle an old score with their enemies." - Jan Knappert

Report Five

This report will be written from the perspective of the crocodile and will contain factual information about the crocodile's feeding habits and/or digestive system.

Report Six

This report will be written by a hunter who disagrees with the International Convention on Endangered Species (CITES).
